60	"My name is Jennifer Smith. I graduated from ABC University with a degree in women's studies. I started at ABC with a major in biology, thinking I was going to pursue a career in environmental protection. But then, two things happened. First, I realized that I was more interested in environmental policy rather than the scientific aspect. Then I took an elective in women's rights and a light went on for me. I had always supported women's rights and was amazed that it continues to be an issue in this day and age. Since that time, I have been able to volunteer and work on behalf of women's rights, both for abused women as well as homeless women. I am here today because I believe my demonstrated passion for women's rights as well as my experience in non-profit organizations will be beneficial to your organization."
61	"I have been at my company for three years now and have learned a lot from working with some amazing salespeople. I worked my way up to regional sales manager 18 months ago and my region has beat our sales projections by at least 25% each quarter since. However, I am starting to feel like I need some new challenges. This position really appeals to me because it would allow me to manage a bigger team and sell more innovative products." https://career.sfsu.edu/sites/default/files/documents/02%20-%20Answering%20Top%20Interview%20Questions.pdf
